Grant conditions

cromAwards · Study and fine-art materials grants
Version 1.1 · Effective date: 21/11/2026 · Version history

1. Who offers the grants

The grants published on cromawards.com are offered, as stated in each call, by:

- cromAwards, that is, Gextiona Interproducción, S.L. (tax ID B-87967592, C/ Francisco Silvela 110, 2º — 28002 Madrid, Spain), owner of the cromAwards brand, alone or with the collaboration of a sponsor; or
- a cromAwards sponsor, which in that case is the one offering and funding the grant.

In these conditions, «the offering entity» is whoever offers each grant. In all cases, cromAwards manages the receipt and study of applications through cromawards.com. They are not public aid or public subsidies.

2. Types of grant

- Study grants: support for the beneficiary's artistic training.
- Fine-art materials grants: supply of materials for their artistic work.

Each call states which types of grant are offered. The specific form of each grant (for example, paying a course fee or supplying a set of materials) is agreed with the beneficiary. Grants are not paid in cash and cannot be exchanged for cash.

3. Who can apply

Artists aged 18 or over who do not have sufficient financial resources to pay for their training or their materials. Applications are personal: applications on behalf of third parties are not accepted.

4. How to apply

Through the form published on cromawards.com. To send the application, these conditions must be accepted. No documents are attached to the application. On sending it, the applicant receives an acknowledgement of receipt by email with a reference. Sending an application does not give any right to receive a grant.

5. How grants are awarded

1. Pre-selection: cromAwards reviews the applications received and rules out those that do not meet these conditions.
2. Study by a committee: applications that pass the pre-selection are studied by a committee appointed by cromAwards, in which the offering entity may take part, and which assesses, among others, these criteria: the applicant's financial situation, their artistic track record or potential, and how well the grant fits what they need.
3. Documents: the committee may ask for documents proving some of those criteria (for example, the financial situation). If they are not provided within the period indicated, the application may be closed.
4. Portfolio on cromAwards: in some cases, the committee may expressly ask an applicant in writing to create a basic portfolio on cromAwards in order to assess their work. It is not a requirement to apply: only those who receive that request should create one, and creating one without it is not taken into account in the assessment. The portfolio is governed by the cromAwards terms of use and is subject to its portfolio approval criteria, so cromAwards may reject the publication of a portfolio created without that request.

The committee's decision is final. The number of grants and their scope depend on the resources allocated by the offering entity, and a call may be declared void.

6. Notification of the decision cromAwards notifies the award by email only to the beneficiaries. If you do not receive that notification, please understand that your application has not been selected.

7. Publication of the results

By applying for the grant, the applicant accepts these conditions and, if they become a beneficiary, the publication of their first name and surname as a beneficiary, together with the type of grant and the offering entity, on cromawards.com, on the cromAwards social networks and, where applicable, in the offering entity's media. No other personal data is published, nor anything from the information or documents provided to apply for or study the grant.

8. Beneficiaries' commitments

- To use the grant for the purpose for which it is awarded.

- To provide truthful information. If it is found not to be, the offering entity may withdraw the grant and ask for what was provided to be returned.

9. Changes to the conditions

Grants are subject to these conditions, which may vary. cromAwards may change them, and the offering entity may suspend or cancel a call, at any time. Changes do not affect grants already awarded. The current version and the date of each change are shown on this page.

10. Taxation

The grant may have tax effects for the beneficiary under the applicable rules. The offering entity will make, where applicable, any withholdings or notifications required of it by law.

11. Personal data

The processing of application data is governed by the cromAwards Privacy policy, section «Messages to sponsors and grant applications».

12. Applicable law

These conditions are governed by Spanish law. Any dispute shall be submitted to the courts and tribunals that are competent under the applicable rules.
